

General Theater Studies Summer Program Student Application

GENERAL THEATER STUDIES 2010

Now in its sixth year, the Goodman's General Theater Studies program is an entirely FREE, six-week intensive introduction to theater arts for 14 to 19-year-old students in the Chicago metropolitan area. Held at the Goodman, this program gives students the opportunity to learn skills from local theater professionals that are instantly applicable not only to the world of theater, but also their world at large.

General Theater Studies focuses on critical literacy and storytelling. The summer program is designed to validate the voices of its participants, get them to examine their own potential for creativity and introduce them to all elements of the creation of theater, both on the stage and behind the scenes. Utilizing techniques from oral history and personal storytelling, the 2010 program explores loss and tragedy: how shared hardships impact individuals and communities, and how we find the strength to move forward, together.

This ensemble-building program will culminate in public presentations of an original performance created by the participants that weaves together their own stories with stories collected through interviews and research, ultimately exploring how each of us contribute to the human drama. Students will be able to collectively develop and design lighting, sound and costumes for the production.
