welcome

We are thrilled that you are here with us for this very special production—the one that we are proud to say has become Chicago’s premiere holiday tradition. “A Christmas Carol” has been staged by Goodman Theatre since 1978; I had the honor of helping launch the original production, and have been involved in every subsequent version. While we were unable to gather for live-in-person performances during the winter of 2020, thanks to the artistry, initiative and ingenuity of our artists and staff, the Goodman was able to produce a fully realized audio version of “A Christmas Carol.” It gave us a measure of joy to bring this timeless story to an audience of approximately 150,000, providing some sense of community and hope at the end of a terrible year.

For all of us at Goodman Theatre, it is thrilling to bring “A Christmas Carol” back to audiences in the theater. Some of you saw the original production and are now bringing children and grandchildren. Some of you have joined us for 30 or more years of “A Christmas Carol.” Some of you are seeing your first play tonight while others are veteran theatergoers but new to this production. We welcome you all to the Goodman and I know that you will cherish being together tonight.

The decision to produce “A Christmas Carol” was based on the fact that Mr. Dickens’ story was universal and timeless. It spoke to all of humankind, urging us to think of the welfare of others and not just our own personal desires. As we come to the end of 2021, it is clear that the message of “A Christmas Carol” resonates now, more than ever.

Welcome back to the Goodman. May you enjoy the hope and joy of the season tonight and a better year ahead.

Roche Schulfer

Executive Director

P.S. If you enjoyed last year’s audio adaptation of “A Christmas Carol,” you will be able to listen to it re-broadcast on WBEZ Radio (Chicago’s NPR news source) on December 24 and 25.
Making Holiday Magic
By Jaclyn Jermyn

After being at the helm of last year’s “A Christmas Carol”—An Audio Play, director Jessica Thebus celebrates getting back on stage and shares her vision for creating a more inclusive and fantastical production.

What about “A Christmas Carol” draws you in?

It’s the story. I feel like the story that I always want to see and always want to make is one that is exciting to follow, but is also about transformation. “A Christmas Carol” is the story about transformation being possible. And Dickens’ writing is just fantastic—there’s not a whole ton of it in this adaptation, but it’s beautiful, it’s funny and it’s truthful.

You directed “A Christmas Carol”—An Audio Play last year. What was that experience like?

I remember thinking last year when we were trying to figure out what to do that we can’t not have “A Christmas Carol.” It's such a ritual. All of those days where we were trying to find what was possible and what was safe were stressful, but that’s in contrast to the fact that when we actually did it, it was incredibly fun! We had this wonderful cast, many of which we have back with us this year. Even though we were in plexiglass booths, it was so fun to be in the room together sharing this story.
Richard Woodbury, our sound designer, has designed “A Christmas Carol” for years. And of course I’ve seen it for years on the stage and I was preparing to think of it on the stage. The Buddhists talk of “Beginner's Mind.” You don’t actually want to walk around like you’re an expert; you want to have the freshness of a beginner. I feel like that’s what that situation did. We both knew a lot about the story, but we were suddenly in a situation where we were thinking about what’s going to work. What do we need to hear that will help us see? It’s really great to be back in the visual world, but there are definitely some moments we loved in the audio adaptation that we want to try and keep the essence of.

Can you share an example?

Take the narrator. It was so satisfying to hear all that Dickens last year, so we wanted to keep some of it and keep that character. You don’t need a ton, a little goes a long way. Dickens talks in the novella about just how cold it was. He says it again and again, and it’s not like we have the visual of everyone wearing puffer coats. That’s something we can speak to a little bit with a narrator. In the audio play, the narrator had to tell us things we couldn’t see. Now that we can see everything, the narrator has to tell us what’s important. I always think of the narrator as whispering in the ear of the audience.
What are you bringing to this production that feels unique to your artistic vision?

I also don’t feel a lot of pressure to put my own stamp on it, but I do have things that I love. The visual world of “A Christmas Carol” can be anything. Sometimes we’re so uptight as theatermakers saying, “that doesn’t look real.” I’m really interested in the truth of dreams. What we can do in the theater is show with all of our colors how things feel and “A Christmas Carol” has so many options for that. It’s so magical when you watch things change before your eyes and what we can do in the theater is actually experience magical transformation.

Where are you drawing inspiration from?

With the Ghosts of Christmas Past and Present, it’s really open to interpretation. I am interested in the idea that although this story is rooted in Christmas, it’s not actually particularly religious. I think it’s really important that the story be inclusive. This celebration is for everyone. I’m also really interested in the imagery related to those indigenous to the British Isles. In the novella, Scrooge wakes up and his walls are covered in holly and ivy, and the Ghost of Christmas Present is covered in green. Evergreens and plants that don’t wither are Celtic and Duridic imagery. Christmas itself is such a layering of traditions from all over the place and the need for a winter festival spans so many cultures. All three spirits have nods to that indigenous world which just roots the story for me in a magic that predates Christmas—it has always been there.

“A Christmas Carol” has a long history, but does this story say anything about the times we’re living in now?

Just a decade before this story was written, there was a Cholera epidemic in London. It’s all very related to the story. When Ortle and Crumb say “the need is so great at this present time,” I really want that to feel specific. I really want audiences to be able to see people on the street, gathered around these little fires and it being so cold. It really reminds me of last winter when we would all gather around fire pits outside. Everybody would be masked and stand apart, but we would still gather. It made me feel like you can choose to celebrate and you can choose something beautiful. We are living that. And we see Scrooge refusing to do any of these things. But he is offered a hand—he gets the hand up that Marley never got and he’s saved as a result, saved from his own cruelty.

Why do you think people return to this story year after year?

Ritual is so important. We have these rituals that mark the passage of time—as human beings, we want to gather. The theater is great for ritual because it feels like a sacred thing. Human beings performing for each other and enacting stories will always happen because we need it. “A Christmas Carol” is an important part of that. So I’m really looking forward to being in that audience. I think it’s a magical place to be.

Jaclyn Jermyn is the Publicity Coordinator for Goodman Theatre.
Charles Dickens began writing “A Christmas Carol” in October 1843. He finished it by the end of November, and on December 19, it appeared in bookstores. By February 1844, eight theatre companies had mounted productions of the ghostly Christmas tale. These rapid page-to-stage transformations were not uncommon in Dickens’ day: indeed, eager adapters often put his serial novels onstage before their final installments were even published! But unlike most of the literary work that graced the mid-19th century stage, “A Christmas Carol” has unflaggingly sustained its popularity to the present day.

In addition to the countless stage adaptations mounted in Dickens’ lifetime, Dickens himself performed his text. Late in his life, he toured Britain and America giving readings of his works, often including “A Christmas Carol.” By all accounts, Dickens was a master storyteller who put on a lively voice for each character and often edited or changed the text to appeal to a particular audience. After Dickens’ death, the tradition of reading “A Christmas Carol” aloud continued: the 20th century saw readings by Lionel Barrymore, Eleanor Roosevelt and scores of Dickens impersonators. The 20th century also introduced a new medium for Dickens’ classic work. In 1901, the first film version of the story, titled Scrooge; or Marley’s Ghost, debuted in Britain—the first American film version was made in Chicago just seven years later. Dozens of films followed in the ensuing decades, with distinguished actors such as Seymour Hicks, Alistair Sim, and Albert Finney in the central role of Scrooge.

The second half of the 20th century saw some less distinguished, but arguably more famous, folks playing Scrooge. Since the early 1960s, film and TV writers have placed their well-known characters in Dickens’ classic story—“Mr. Magoo’s Christmas Carol” debuted in 1962 with Magoo himself portraying Scrooge. It was followed by “Mickey’s Christmas Carol” in 1983, aptly featuring Scrooge McDuck, and 1992’s “The Muppet Christmas Carol,” which showcased Michael Caine as “Scrooge” opposite Kermit the Frog as Bob Cratchit. The gang on Sesame Street joined the trend later, producing a direct-to-video film in 2006 with Oscar the Grouch typecast as the miserly protagonist.

Others who have taken a crack at the old Christmas chestnut include Bugs Bunny, the Flintstones, the Jetsons, Brer Rabbit, and more satirically, Blackadder and the anthropomorphic produce of Veggie Tales. Between Thanksgiving and New Year’s, a television viewer would be hard-pressed to avoid all traces of “A Christmas Carol.”

Indeed, even during its off-season, “A Christmas Carol” stays with us. We use the term Scrooge to refer not just to Dickens’ character, but to any penny-pinching curmudgeon. Few literary characters see their names made into words: Scrooge stands in the rarified company of such luminaries as Romeo, Don Juan, and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. We have also co-opted Scrooge’s catchphrase Bah humbug!, which now functions as a broad expression of disapproval. And though Tim was tiny, his influence isn’t: countless centers and funds for disabled children bear his name.

Despite the ubiquity and accessibility of “A Christmas Carol” on screen and in print, the heartwarming story spurs us to seek out live performances. “A Christmas Carol,” which incites us to reexamine our relationships with both friends and strangers, is a story best experienced communally. That explains why, even in this age of YouTube and Netflix, thousands of Americans savor “A Christmas Carol” at regional theaters across the country. Just as 19th century audiences packed auditoriums for Dickens’ spirited readings, 21st century audiences come together to delight in adaptations. A few things have changed—Goodman Theatre’s production uses modern staging techniques and technology unheard of in Dickens’ day—but much has stayed the same. The story still spurs us to scrutinize ourselves and our community, and it still doses up much-needed holiday cheer. Nearly 180 years after its first publication, “A Christmas Carol” maintains a prominent place on our bookshelves, screens and stages—and more importantly, in our hearts and minds.

ROCHE EDWARD SCHULFER (Goodman Theatre Executive Director) started working in the Goodman Theatre box office and became executive director in 1980. Since that time he has overseen more than 350 productions including more than 150 premieres. He initiated the Goodman’s annual production of “A Christmas Carol,” which celebrated 42 years as Chicago’s leading holiday arts tradition in 2019. In partnership with Artistic Director Robert Falls, Mr. Schulfer led the establishment of quality, diversity and community engagement as the core values of Goodman Theatre. During their tenure, the Goodman has received numerous awards for excellence, including the Tony Award for Outstanding Regional Theater, recognition by Time magazine as the “Best Regional Theatre” in the U.S., the Pulitzer Prize for Lynn Nottage’s “Ruined” and many Jeff Awards for outstanding achievement in Chicago area theater. Schulfer has negotiated the presentation of numerous Goodman Theatre productions to national and international venues. He coordinated the 12-year process to relocate the Goodman to the Theatre District in 2000. To mark his 40th anniversary with the Goodman, his name was added to the theater’s “Walk of Stars.” Schulfer was a founder and twice chair of the League of Chicago Theatres, the trade association of more than 200 Chicago area theaters and producers. He has been privileged to serve in leadership roles with Arts Alliance Illinois (the statewide advocacy coalition); Theatre Communications Group (the national service organization for more than 500 not-for-profit theaters); the Performing Arts Alliance (the national advocacy consortium of more than 18,000 organizations and individuals); the League of Resident Theatres (the management association of over 70 leading U.S. theater companies); Life line Theatre; the Arts & Business Council and Theater Wit. Mr. Schulfer is honored to have been recognized with the League of Chicago Theater’s Lifetime Achievement Award; Theatre Communication Group’s Visionary Leadership Award; Actors’ Equity Association for promoting diversity and equal opportunity in Chicago theater; the American Arts Alliance and Arts Alliance Illinois for arts advocacy; the Arts & Business Council for distinguished contributions to Chicago’s artistic vitality; Chicago magazine and the Chicago Tribune as a “Chicagoan of the Year”; the City of Chicago; the Chicago Loop Alliance’s “Illumination Award,” honoring his commitment to Chicago’s theater district; Columbia College Chicago for entrepreneurial leadership; the Joseph Jefferson Awards Committee for his partnership with Robert Falls; Lawyers for the Creative Arts; Lifeline Theatre’s Raymond R. Snyder Award for Commitment to the Arts; Season of Concern for support of direct care for those living with HIV/AIDS and Vision 2020 for promoting gender equality and diversity in the workplace. He taught at the theater school at DePaul University, lectured annually on strategic planning in the arts at Southern Methodist University and frequently consults with local and national theater companies. Schulfer received a degree in economics from the University of Notre Dame where he served as cultural art commissioner and currently conducts an annual seminar on theater management. He received an Honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree from North Central College in 2009. His celebrated presentation on the economics of the performing arts and business models in the theater industry, WHY NOT FOR PROFIT THEATER, has been seen by numerous theater companies and at national conferences over the past two years. Mr. Schulfer was born in Chicago and is a lifelong resident of the area.
about us

AMERICA’S “BEST REGIONAL THEATRE” (Time magazine), Goodman Theatre is a premier not-for-profit organization distinguished by the excellence and scope of its artistic programming and civic engagement. Led by Artistic Director Robert Falls and Executive Director Roche Schulfer, the theater’s artistic priorities include new play development (more than 150 world or American premieres in the past three decades), large scale musical theater works and reimagined classics (celebrated revivals include Falls’ productions of “Death of a Salesman” and “The Iceman Cometh”). Goodman Theatre artists and productions have earned two Pulitzer Prizes, 22 Tony Awards, over 160 Jeff Awards and many more accolades. In addition, the Goodman is the first theater in the world to produce all 10 plays in August Wilson’s “American Century Cycle;” and its annual holiday tradition “A Christmas Carol,” now in its fifth decade, has created a new generation of theatergoers. The Goodman also frequently serves as a production partner with local off-Loop theaters and national and international companies by providing financial support or physical space for a variety of artistic endeavors.

Committed to three core values of Quality, Diversity and Community, the Goodman proactively makes inclusion the fabric of the institution and develops education and community engagement programs that support arts as education. This practice uses the process of artistic creation to inspire youth, lifelong learners and audiences to find and/or enhance their voices, stories and abilities. The Goodman’s Alice Rapoport Center for Education and Engagement is the home of such programming, most offered free of charge, and has vastly expanded the theater’s ability to touch the lives of Chicagoland citizens (with 85% of youth participants coming from underserved communities) since its 2016 opening.

Goodman Theatre was founded by William O. Goodman and his family in honor of their son Kenneth, an important figure in Chicago’s cultural renaissance in the early 1900s. The Goodman family’s legacy lives on through the continued work and dedication of Kenneth’s family, including Albert Ivar Goodman, who with his late mother, Edith-Marie Appleton, contributed the necessary funds for the creation of the new Goodman center in 2000.

Today, Goodman Theatre leadership also includes the distinguished members of the Artistic Collective: Rebecca Gilman, Dael Orlandersmith, Henry Godinez, Steve Scott, Kimberly Senior, Chuck Smith, Regina Taylor, Henry Wishcamper and Mary Zimmerman. Jeff Hesse is Chairman of Goodman Theatre’s Board of Trustees, Fran Del Boca is Women’s Board President and Megan McCarthy Hayes is President of the Scenemakers Board for young professionals.
Our Community Agreement

As the premier cultural organization in Chicago, Goodman Theatre values equity, diversity and inclusion, and is committed to infusing these ideals into every aspect of our operations. We recognize that our individual intersectional identities represented across staff, board, artists and audiences bring vibrancy to our work and help make us better equipped to reflect our world—both on stage and off.

To that end, Goodman Theatre welcomes patrons, guests, artists, and community members of all abilities, ages, backgrounds, beliefs, ethnicities, genders, gender expressions, races, sexual orientations, socio-economic statuses, and all other identities, and makes a commitment to provide a safe and respectful space for all who join us.

We commit to providing a clean, secure, and welcoming facility; and a safe, encouraging environment for all people.

To meet these commitments, we will maintain standards and guidelines for all employees, contractors, personnel and patrons.

We welcome you to the Goodman and we ask that you join us in enacting these values. Behavior that is not in accordance with our values will not be tolerated.

If you witness or experience behavior inconsistent with these values, please speak to management, email code@goodmantheatre.org, or call 312.443.5400.
