welcome

An all-female mariachi band: it doesn’t sound so unbelievable in 2021. But in José Cruz González’s play American Mariachi, the characters inhabit a more sexist, 1970s world that is only beginning to change its attitude towards women. When several young women decide to form a band, their lack of musical ability isn’t the only thing holding them back—they also face a rigid tradition that disapproves of their ambitions. But these women aren’t content to sit quietly at home and, as it turns out, there is no tradition that can’t be questioned or altered.

I am thrilled to welcome José, who makes his Goodman debut. His plays have been produced at multiple regional theaters including the Old Globe, the Denver Center for the Performing Arts and the Geva Theatre Center. He has also written for The PAZ Show, an Emmy Award-nominated television series produced by Discovery Kids for The Learning Channel, and is a professor emeritus at UCLA. I admire the shrewd humor with which he infuses his big-hearted and life-affirming plays. American Mariachi is directed by Goodman Resident Artistic Associate Henry Godinez, who has not only directed and acted in many Goodman productions, but has also championed the work of countless Latinx artists and helped bring their powerful stories to the stage. A versatile and skilled director, Henry possesses an inherent understanding of music, which allows him to weave mariachi music seamlessly into the production.

A co-production with Dallas Theater Center, American Mariachi had its final dress rehearsal in Dallas in March of 2020. We had intended to produce it that spring— but after an 18-month delay, José’s comic masterpiece has finally arrived on the Goodman stage. It has been well worth the wait. I invite you to enjoy the hijinks and heart of American Mariachi, a vital new American play.

Robert Falls,
Artistic Director of Goodman Theatre
Breaking With Tradition

By Jaclyn Jermyn

Just as the company of American Mariachi was finishing their final dress rehearsal at production partner Dallas Theater Center in March of 2020, the theater world as they knew it was put on pause. Now, nearly a year-and-a-half later, Director Henry Godinez traces his path from Dallas back to the Goodman stage and how that time has helped him dive deeper into the play’s emotional depths.

In your eyes, what are the big themes in American Mariachi?

It’s about love—love of family, love of music and also love of tradition, but finding new ways to look at tradition. Mariachi music is traditionally an all-male musical form. It’s so poignant right now in our society, the way women are staking their claim. I think it’s about women saying “no” and “we get to choose, we get to decide this tradition belongs to us too.” So it’s a play about love, music, community and the way traditions can become more inclusive and representative.

This production was having its final dress rehearsal at Dallas Theater Center when it was halted due to COVID-19. How does it feel to finally be getting it back up on stage—especially the Goodman stage?
It’s going to feel great to both finish it—a final dress rehearsal is far from the finished product—and to bring it home. Half the cast is from Chicago and half the cast is from Dallas so I think the Chicago actors are really excited to welcome them to our city as they did for us when we were in Dallas.

Have the events of the past year-and-a-half colored how you interpret this story?

I believe in theater—maybe in art in general—contrast is a very powerful thing. In the past year-and-a-half, we’ve come to learn just how precious and vulnerable life is. I’m excited to go back into this play and look at it on an even deeper level. It’s a very funny and touching play. The more that we really delve into that humanity and what it means to care for a family member who is struggling not just with physical health, but mental health as well, the more poignant it will be. At the same time, I believe we’ll also be able to mine more of the humor and charm present.

Between American Mariachi and performances in Chicago parks of Fannie Lou Hamer, Speak On It! and Zulema—for all of which you were a director—there are clear common elements of telling big stories through music, but they aren’t what audiences might recognize as musical theater. Why are you drawn to these kinds of productions?

As a director, I’m not what you would call a musical theater person, but to be able to work on plays where music is centrally positioned is super cool. I love music, I’ve always loved music. And I think that music is probably the most direct way to get to the soul of a person—and to really move a person emotionally and psychologically. It’s been really special to work on these three plays. I think for non-traditional audiences, it’s an automatic invitation to give themselves over to the work. It really touches them on a very basic human level. My great mentor Luis Valdez said sometimes when people can’t come to the theater, we have to take theater to the people. I’ve been so blessed in my work at the Goodman to really champion underrepresented voices, particularly in the Latinx community. It’s been really moving to take these performances into the community and see the way that people respond to them. It’s been a huge gift to me.

What can audiences about to watch American Mariachi have to look forward to?

Audiences can look forward to having a really good time. I think they can also expect to look into what it means to be a part of a family in the traditional and non-traditional sense. They are coming back into the theater and reconnecting with this sense of community, what it means to be a part of the audience—but also a part of a larger human community—and finding that common ground that all of us share as human beings.

The characters of American Mariachi take a stand against stereotypes when they strike upon the radical idea of creating an all-women mariachi band. Chicago is home to its own all-women mariachi band: the Mariachi Sirenas (MariachiSirenas.com). Group co-founders Eréndira Izguerra, (who plays Tía Carmen in American Mariachi) and Ibet Herrera share how representation has the potential to change a culture.

“I’m a first-generation mariachi musician,” says Erendira Izguerra. “It’s a generational tradition—if you were born in a mariachi family, you kind of have to be a mariachi.” As part of Mariachi Sirenas, which Izguerra and Ibet Herrera started in March of 2017, they work with women that don’t often come from mariachi families. “We’re creating our own standards,” says Izguerra. “We’re not letting mariachi being a male-dominated tradition stop us from doing what we love.”

Sometimes, when the group is out, dressed in their suits and holding their instrument cases, they get stopped and asked if they’re going to sing or dance. “To these people, being a musician is not an option,” says Izguerra. “Why are women labeled as only singers or dancers? Why can’t we do all three? We do all three!”
Slowly but surely, they are crossing those bridges. “In these times, we’re still fighting against this machismo mentality,” says Izguerra “but we started this group to empower women.” Herrera adds that the community has been very supportive. “We have a booked calendar just like everyone else,” she says.

That journey hasn’t been without its challenges. When COVID-19 forced the group to stop performing and practicing together, the group collaborated to devise musical practice challenges and later, virtual performances. During this time, the Mariachi Sirenas still managed to accomplish a major goal: as of January 2021, they are now a full mariachi ensemble. “For the first time ever, we have three trumpets, three armonía and six violins,” says Izguerra. “It’s something we have struggled to attain since there aren’t many women mariachis in the Windy City.”

That accomplishment has created moments of intense vulnerability and connection. “I don’t think I truly appreciated mariachi music until I started consciously listening to all the nuances of the instruments complementing each other," says Izguerra.

The group is back to rehearsing and performing together, but their time apart has put things into perspective. Much like in American Mariachi, music has the power to bring people together in important ways. “When we were not able to get together and play, we really felt how much we took each other, and what we do together, for granted,” says Herrera. “It goes beyond music. We have grown to be a sisterhood.”

DALLAS THEATER CENTER One of the leading regional theaters in the country and the 2017 Regional Theatre Tony Award® Recipient, Dallas Theater Center (DTC) performs to an audience of more than 100,000 people annually. Founded in 1959, DTC is now a resident company of the AT&T Performing Arts Center and presents its Mainstage season at the Dee and Charles Wyly Theatre and at its original home, the Kalita Humphreys Theater. DTC is one of only two theaters in Texas that is a member of the League of Resident Theatres, the largest and most prestigious non-profit professional theater association in the country. Under the leadership of Enloe/Rose Artistic Director Kevin Moriarty and Managing Director Jeffrey Woodward, Dallas Theater Center produces a year-round subscription series of classics, musicals, and new plays and an annual production of A Christmas Carol. In 2017, in collaboration with Ignite/Arts Dallas at SMU Meadows School of the Arts and the AT&T Performing Arts Center, DTC launched Public Works Dallas, a groundbreaking community engagement and participatory theater project culminating in an annual production featuring more than 200 Dallas citizens performing a large-scale theatrical production. Throughout its history, DTC has produced many new works, including the recent premieres of Stagger Lee by Will Power; Hood: The Robin Hood Musical Adventure by Douglas Carter Beane and Lewis Flinn; penny candy by Jonathan Norton and Clarkston by Samuel D. Hunter. Dallas Theater Center gratefully acknowledges the support of our season sponsors: Texas Instruments and Texas Instruments Foundation, The Shubert Foundation, American Airlines, City of Dallas Office of Arts and Culture, Lexus, TACA, and Texas Commission on the Arts.
ROBERT FALLS (Goodman Theatre Artistic Director) recent Goodman credits include The Sound Inside, The Winter’s Tale, We’re Only Alive for A Short Amount of Time, Pamplona, An Enemy of the People, 2666 and The Iceman Cometh. Falls’ Broadway productions include Death of a Salesman, Long Day’s Journey into Night, Talk Radio, Shining City and The Young Man from Atlanta. His Broadway production of Elton John and Tim Rice’s Aida continues to be produced around the world. Previous Goodman productions include, most notably, The Seagull, Uncle Vanya, Measure for Measure, King Lear, Desire Under the Elms, Finishing the Picture, The Misanthrope, Pal Joey, Galileo, House and Garden, Blue Surge, Dollhouse and Luna Gale. Falls’ honors for directing include a Tony Award (Death of a Salesman), a Drama Desk Award (Long Day’s Journey into Night), an Obie Award (subUrbia), a Helen Hayes Award (King Lear) and multiple Jeff Awards. For “outstanding contributions to theater,” he has also been recognized with such prestigious honors as the Savva Morozov Diamond Award (Moscow Art Theatre), the O’Neill Medallion (Eugene O’Neill Society) and the Illinois Arts Council Governor’s Award. Falls was inducted into the Theater Hall of Fame in 2015.
ROCHE EDWARD SCHULFER (Goodman Theatre Executive Director) started working in the Goodman Theatre box office and became executive director in 1980. Since that time he has overseen more than 350 productions including more than 150 premieres. He initiated the Goodman’s annual production of A Christmas Carol, which celebrated 42 years as Chicago’s leading holiday arts tradition in 2019. In partnership with Artistic Director Robert Falls, Mr. Schulfer led the establishment of quality, diversity and community engagement as the core values of Goodman Theatre. During their tenure, the Goodman has received numerous awards for excellence, including the Tony Award for Outstanding Regional Theater, recognition by Time magazine as the “Best Regional Theatre” in the U.S., the Pulitzer Prize for Lynn Nottage’s Ruined and many Jeff Awards for outstanding achievement in Chicago area theater. Schulfer has negotiated the presentation of numerous Goodman Theatre productions to national and international venues. He coordinated the 12-year process to relocate the Goodman to the Theatre District in 2000. To mark his 40th anniversary with the Goodman, his name was added to the theater’s “Walk of Stars.” Schulfer was a founder and twice chair of the League of Chicago Theatres, the trade association of more than 200 Chicago area theaters and producers. He has been privileged to serve in leadership roles with Arts Alliance Illinois (the statewide advocacy coalition); Theatre Communications Group (the national service organization for more than 500 not-for-profit theaters); the Performing Arts Alliance (the national advocacy consortium of more than 18,000 organizations and individuals); the League of Resident Theatres (the management association of over 70 leading U.S. theater companies); Lifeline Theatre; the Arts & Business Council and Theater Wit. Mr. Schulfer is honored to have been recognized with the League of Chicago Theater’s Lifetime Achievement Award; Theatre Communication Group’s Visionary Leadership Award; Actors’ Equity Association for promoting diversity and equal opportunity in Chicago theater; the American Arts Alliance and Arts Alliance Illinois for arts advocacy; the Arts & Business Council for distinguished contributions to Chicago’s artistic vitality; Chicago magazine and the Chicago Tribune as a “Chicagoan of the Year”; the City of Chicago; the Chicago Loop Alliance’s “Illumination Award,” honoring his commitment to Chicago’s theater district; Columbia College Chicago for entrepreneurial leadership; the Joseph Jefferson Awards Committee for his partnership with Robert Falls; Lawyers for the Creative Arts; Lifeline Theatre’s Raymond R. Snyder Award for Commitment to the Arts; Season of Concern for support of direct care for those living with HIV/AIDS and Vision 2020 for promoting gender equality and diversity in the workplace. He taught at the theater school at DePaul University, lectured annually on strategic planning in the arts at Southern Methodist University and frequently consults with local and national theater companies. Schulfer received a degree in economics from the University of Notre Dame where he served as cultural art commissioner and currently conducts an annual seminar on theater management. He received an Honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree from North Central College in 2009. His celebrated presentation on the economics of the performing arts and business models in the theater industry, WHY NOT FOR PROFIT THEATER, has been seen by numerous theater companies and at national conferences over the past two years. Mr. Schulfer was born in Chicago and is a lifelong resident of the area.
About Us

AMERICA’S “BEST REGIONAL THEATRE” (Time magazine), Goodman Theatre is a premier not-for-profit organization distinguished by the excellence and scope of its artistic programming and civic engagement. Led by Artistic Director Robert Falls and Executive Director Roche Schulfer, the theater’s artistic priorities include new play development (more than 150 world or American premieres in the past three decades), large scale musical theater works and reimagined classics (celebrated revivals include Falls’ productions of Death of a Salesman and The Iceman Cometh). Goodman Theatre artists and productions have earned two Pulitzer Prizes, 22 Tony Awards, over 160 Jeff Awards and many more accolades. In addition, the Goodman is the first theater in the world to produce all 10 plays in August Wilson’s “American Century Cycle;” and its annual holiday tradition A Christmas Carol, now in its fifth decade, has created a new generation of theatergoers. The Goodman also frequently serves as a production partner with local off-Loop theaters and national and international companies by providing financial support or physical space for a variety of artistic endeavors.

Committed to three core values of Quality, Diversity and Community, the Goodman proactively makes inclusion the fabric of the institution and develops education and community engagement programs that support arts as education. This practice uses the process of artistic creation to inspire youth, lifelong learners and audiences to find and/or enhance their voices, stories and abilities. The Goodman’s Alice Rapoport Center for Education and Engagement is the home of such programming, most offered free of charge, and has vastly expanded the theater’s ability to touch the lives of Chicagoland citizens (with 85% of youth participants coming from underserved communities) since its 2016 opening.

Goodman Theatre was founded by William O. Goodman and his family in honor of their son Kenneth, an important figure in Chicago’s cultural renaissance in the early 1900s. The Goodman family’s legacy lives on through the continued work and dedication of Kenneth’s family, including Albert Ivar Goodman, who with his late mother, Edith-Marie Appleton, contributed the necessary funds for the creation of the new Goodman center in 2000.

Today, Goodman Theatre leadership also includes the distinguished members of the Artistic Collective: Rebecca Gilman, Dael Orlandersmith, Henry Godinez, Steve Scott, Kimberly Senior, Chuck Smith, Regina Taylor, Henry Wishcamper and Mary Zimmerman. Jeff Hesse is Chairman of Goodman Theatre’s Board of Trustees, Fran Del Boca is Women’s Board President and Megan McCarthy Hayes is President of the Scenemakers Board for young professionals.
