welcome

After a hiatus in 2020, we are thrilled to produce our New Stages Festival, which has long been a bedrock of Goodman Theatre programming. At once a celebration of playwrights, their work and the innovation of the American Theater, the Festival provides a fertile ground in which a writer can experiment and home in on the story they want to tell—in a unique collaborative setting with directors, actors, designers and dramaturgs.

This year’s Festival was curated by Jonathan Green, our recently appointed Director of New Work and longtime member of our artistic staff. Prior to his work at the Goodman, Jonathan co-founded Sideshow Theatre Company, an adventurous local company with an impressive history of developing new plays. Jonathan and I are thrilled to welcome artists Martin Zebari, Max Yu, José Rivera, Beth Hyland, Dael Orlandersmith and Jo Cattell to New Stages. Some are early-career, some have many credits to their name; all are working to bring their play to vivid life.

I invite you to approach New Stages with the same open-mindedness and excitement that the artists themselves do: these plays are shifting and changing each day, and their possibilities are limitless.

Robert Falls, Artistic Director at Goodman Theatre
meet the curator

For 17 years, New Stages has been the Goodman’s primary incubator of new plays. The works developed in this series are the world premieres you will see on our mainstages—and stages across the country—in coming years. To date, we’ve supported nearly 100 plays, which have gone on to productions at 130 different theater companies, in 68 different cities, in 27 different states.

As an audience member, you are essential to our process: New Stages puts playwrights, directors, actors and designers into direct collaboration with you, often more than a year before an official opening night. Our developmental productions allow our artists significant rehearsal time between public performances to re-write and re-stage, inspired by audience response and insight at previous performances. And our staged readings and special events allow writers and other creators to throw brand-new, risky material in front of a packed house to see what happens.

Together, here in this room, we are making the future of American theater. Thank you for being here.

A Conversation with Playwright Martin Yousif Zebari

By Jonathan L. Green

MYZ: The 17-year gap has always been the plan. In fact, the time gap and the double casting of the five actors were the first two things I knew about the play. In my real family, I’m the black sheep. I’m the youngest, I’m an artist, I’m Queer, I’ve never really considered marriage and kids: I’m different from my family in almost every way. And I’ve worn my badges with such pride—in myself and in my courage to be different. At the same time, I’ve always wondered how different my life would be if the same pressures that were placed on my much older siblings were also placed on me. Would I survive a day in their shoes? In their lives that I criticize so harshly? So, from that question came “Layalina.” An opportunity for us to step into our ancestors’ shoes, and really unpack the ways we think we’re so different. Because what I’ve found in that exploration is we’re mostly not.

JLG: How were you introduced to Sivan Battat, your director for this production?

MYZ: In the summer of 2020, “Layalina” was selected to be workshopped and given a staged reading as part of National Queer Theatre’s Criminal Queerness Festival. NQT paired Sivan and me for the reading and it has been a dream collaboration ever since. Sivan gets this play at its deepest, most vulnerable core. And besides their spot-on insight on this play, working with Sivan in a rehearsal room is like witnessing a masterclass. They are revolutionizing the rehearsal room and what it means to get to create this challenging, vulnerable and rewarding work together.

JLG: A year or so ago, you told me that you were considering writing a sequel to “Layalina”—or, at least another play that follows some of the same characters. Any hints about where these people are going after the curtain falls on “Layalina?”

MYZ: Well, at first I was considering a prequel, then I started playing around with a sequel, and now I’m considering a whole saga about this family. I’ve tried to move on, start writing about other people, and I haven’t been able to. I’m not ready to leave them just yet. In terms of where these characters go after “Layalina,” I’m thinking that, for the first time in their collective life together, they won’t be going anywhere. They’ve all been thrown back together and they have to start making sense of their new relationships. I’m really keen on exploring Marwa and Yousif’s futures in a subsequent play down the line.

ROCHE EDWARD SCHULFER (Goodman Theatre Executive Director) started working in the Goodman Theatre box office and became executive director in 1980. Since that time he has overseen more than 350 productions including more than 150 premieres. He initiated the Goodman’s annual production of “A Christmas Carol,” which celebrated 42 years as Chicago’s leading holiday arts tradition in 2019. In partnership with Artistic Director Robert Falls, Mr. Schulfer led the establishment of quality, diversity and community engagement as the core values of Goodman Theatre. During their tenure, the Goodman has received numerous awards for excellence, including the Tony Award for Outstanding Regional Theater, recognition by Time magazine as the “Best Regional Theatre” in the U.S., the Pulitzer Prize for Lynn Nottage’s “Ruined” and many Jeff Awards for outstanding achievement in Chicago area theater. Schulfer has negotiated the presentation of numerous Goodman Theatre productions to national and international venues. He coordinated the 12-year process to relocate the Goodman to the Theatre District in 2000. To mark his 40th anniversary with the Goodman, his name was added to the theater’s “Walk of Stars.” Schulfer was a founder and twice chair of the League of Chicago Theatres, the trade association of more than 200 Chicago area theaters and producers. He has been privileged to serve in leadership roles with Arts Alliance Illinois (the statewide advocacy coalition); Theatre Communications Group (the national service organization for more than 500 not-for-profit theaters); the Performing Arts Alliance (the national advocacy consortium of more than 18,000 organizations and individuals); the League of Resident Theatres (the management association of over 70 leading U.S. theater companies); Lifeline Theatre; the Arts & Business Council and Theater Wit. Mr. Schulfer is honored to have been recognized with the League of Chicago Theater’s Lifetime Achievement Award; Theatre Communication Group’s Visionary Leadership Award; Actors’ Equity Association for promoting diversity and equal opportunity in Chicago theater; the American Arts Alliance and Arts Alliance Illinois for arts advocacy; the Arts & Business Council for distinguished contributions to Chicago’s artistic vitality; Chicago magazine and the Chicago Tribune as a “Chicagoan of the Year”; the City of Chicago; the Chicago Loop Alliance’s “Illumination Award,” honoring his commitment to Chicago’s theater district; Columbia College Chicago for entrepreneurial leadership; the Joseph Jefferson Awards Committee for his partnership with Robert Falls; Lawyers for the Creative Arts; Lifeline Theatre’s Raymond R. Snyder Award for Commitment to the Arts; Season of Concern for support of direct care for those living with HIV/AIDS and Vision 2020 for promoting gender equality and diversity in the workplace. He taught at the theater school at DePaul University, lectured annually on strategic planning in the arts at Southern Methodist University and frequently consults with local and national theater companies. Schulfer received a degree in economics from the University of Notre Dame where he served as cultural art commissioner and currently conducts an annual seminar on theater management. He received an Honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree from North Central College in 2009. His celebrated presentation on the economics of the performing arts and business models in the theater industry, WHY NOT FOR PROFIT THEATER, has been seen by numerous theater companies and at national conferences over the past two years. Mr. Schulfer was born in Chicago and is a lifelong resident of the area.
about us

AMERICA’S “BEST REGIONAL THEATRE” (Time magazine), Goodman Theatre is a premier not-for-profit organization distinguished by the excellence and scope of its artistic programming and civic engagement. Led by Artistic Director Robert Falls and Executive Director Roche Schulfer, the theater’s artistic priorities include new play development (more than 150 world or American premieres in the past three decades), large scale musical theater works and reimagined classics (celebrated revivals include Falls’ productions of “Death of a Salesman” and “The Iceman Cometh”). Goodman Theatre artists and productions have earned two Pulitzer Prizes, 22 Tony Awards, over 160 Jeff Awards and many more accolades. In addition, the Goodman is the first theater in the world to produce all 10 plays in August Wilson’s “American Century Cycle;” and its annual holiday tradition “A Christmas Carol,” now in its fifth decade, has created a new generation of theatergoers. The Goodman also frequently serves as a production partner with local off-Loop theaters and national and international companies by providing financial support or physical space for a variety of artistic endeavors.

Committed to three core values of Quality, Diversity and Community, the Goodman proactively makes inclusion the fabric of the institution and develops education and community engagement programs that support arts as education. This practice uses the process of artistic creation to inspire youth, lifelong learners and audiences to find and/or enhance their voices, stories and abilities. The Goodman’s Alice Rapoport Center for Education and Engagement is the home of such programming, most offered free of charge, and has vastly expanded the theater’s ability to touch the lives of Chicagoland citizens (with 85% of youth participants coming from underserved communities) since its 2016 opening.

Goodman Theatre was founded by William O. Goodman and his family in honor of their son Kenneth, an important figure in Chicago’s cultural renaissance in the early 1900s. The Goodman family’s legacy lives on through the continued work and dedication of Kenneth’s family, including Albert Ivar Goodman, who with his late mother, Edith-Marie Appleton, contributed the necessary funds for the creation of the new Goodman center in 2000.

Today, Goodman Theatre leadership also includes the distinguished members of the Artistic Collective: Rebecca Gilman, Dael Orlandersmith, Henry Godinez, Steve Scott, Kimberly Senior, Chuck Smith, Regina Taylor, Henry Wishcamper and Mary Zimmerman. Jeff Hesse is Chairman of Goodman Theatre’s Board of Trustees, Fran Del Boca is Women’s Board President and Megan McCarthy Hayes is President of the Scenemakers Board for young professionals.
