One of the great assets of Chicago theater is the abundance of diverse companies, each with its own artistic goals and strengths. Every company, including the Goodman, exists within the city’s complex theater ecology where artists of all kinds can learn from each other and audiences can enjoy a wide variety of work. I am proud to highlight the work of a company whose work I have admired for many years: TimeLine Theatre Company, which produces plays that examine historical events in order to help us better understand our current world. As part of TimeLine’s Playwrights Collective, Tyla Abercrumbie developed her play Relentless, an examination of two Black sisters’ discovery of their late mother’s diaries, which reveal secrets about their family’s past in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Best known in Chicago for her prowess as an actor both on stage and on TV’s The Chi, Tyla most recently appeared at the Goodman in Sweat in 2019. Also a director and writer, Tyla has worked at many theatres in the city and across the nation; her plays have been produced at Pittsburgh Playwrights’ Theatre and MPAACT Theatre. After a two-year delay due to the pandemic, Relentless premiered at TimeLine in early 2022. I saw the production and knew that Tyla’s compelling exploration of Black women’s experiences in the Victorian era would enrich and delight Goodman audiences. The play is expertly directed by Ron OJ Parson, who for more than three decades has illuminated and examined Black life on Chicago stages. A passionate and shrewd director, Ron last worked at the Goodman on Sweat and has been a company member at TimeLine since 2016. I am delighted to welcome both Ron and Tyla—longtime collaborators and stalwarts of the Chicago theater scene—back to the Goodman.

Relentless shines a light into a corner of history that many textbooks ignore—and asks us to consider how we navigate through our own complex historical moment, also rife with injustice, bias and uncertainty. I hope you will find it as compelling and thought-provoking as I do.

note from timeline

Whether you’ve followed TimeLine’s work over many years, or you’re experiencing it for the first time, we’re delighted to be welcomed by Goodman to provide extended life for this homegrown play by Tyla Abercrumbie, directed by her longtime collaborator and fellow TimeLine Company Member Ron OJ Parson.

Relentless has been a five-year passion project, developed through TimeLine’s Playwrights Collective and originally slated for its world premiere in 2020. As history unfolded in the intervening months, the prescience and resonance of Tyla’s writing only intensified – as did our unwavering commitment to bring Relentless to the stage.

Finally premiering in January of this year, the audience demand surpassed the capacity of its limited run. Thanks to a collegial spirit between Goodman’s staff and the team I’m honored to work with at TimeLine, a collaboration was forged, making for a Chicago theatre story worth celebrating.

Set in 1919, Relentless reveals a nation reeling from two pandemics—the outbreak of influenza and the enduring scourge of racism. In a city on edge, two sisters gather, in the wake of their mother’s death, to settle her estate. Each on a course to change history, they’re unprepared for what they uncover in diaries left by the woman they thought they fully knew.
It’s a story that exemplifies TimeLine’s mission—providing a lens into how our culture was, juxtaposed with truths about how it is.

Since 1997, that mission has guided us through more than 80 productions of new plays and reimagined classics, making connections between past, present, and future, and probing the social and political issues that define our times.

As we celebrate our 25th Anniversary, we’re preparing to establish the first home of our own in Uptown. As you’ll see on pages 22-23, we’re creating space to grow and innovate—a place that will support new artistic possibilities, allowing for deeper community connections and creating theatergoing experiences that extend far beyond the stage. It will be a place for all of Chicago to gather for revelation. For understanding. For questioning. For celebrating our respective and collective humanity. And for reveling in the communal beauty of live theatre.

With gratitude and hope for tomorrow, TimeLine is so pleased to be here at Goodman and to share with you Relentless.

KHALID Y. LONG: What was your inspiration for writing Relentless?

TYLA ABERCROMBIE: My inspiration for Relentless was a love of the Harlem Renaissance. That might sound odd, but my favorite time in literature was the Harlem Renaissance. As a young girl, I read all the poets and authors and writers of that time, but what became significant was when I read the works of Zora Neal Hurston, Claude McKay, Langston Hughes, and so many more. I became fascinated with how they came to be. Where did this amazing generation of poets and writers descend from, and how were they inspired?

That led me backward to the Victorian Era, Edwardian Era, and so on. I discovered on my own that my heritage was so much more elaborate, intriguing, extraordinary than just bondage. The system we currently learn under and teach the kids of the future perpetuates lies that suggest Black folk had three—now four—central moments in history: slavery/bondage, civil rights, Obama, and now, George Floyd. We are and have always been so much more than that. Our place in history begins with the beginning of time. Researching backward from the Harlem Renaissance inspired me profoundly when I saw the affluent, educated, well-traveled, intensely well-versed, Black Victorian.

KL: Although Relentless is set in 1919, the play is quite relevant today.

TA: When I began writing Relentless during my time with TimeLine’s Playwrights Collective in 2016 and completed it in 2018, I had no way of knowing how prescient the work would be. In fact, after we were postponed in 2020, as the news of the pandemic and unrest, women’s movement, Times Up, and Black Lives Matter unfolded, we were constantly gobsmacked by the literal mirror image of the time. I chose 1919 for Relentless because it was such a pivotal year in the escalating change after the end of World War I. So much was on the horizon, including hope, but so much change exploded. 1919 was a time to be reckoned with; the world woke up in 1919 just as the world woke up in 2020.

KL: Are there any playwrights who inspire your style of playwriting?

TA: Wow! Great question. Yes. Lorraine Hansberry first and foremost inspires me. I was introduced to her by my elder sister, and A Raisin in the Sun remains my favorite play to this day.
I, of course, love August Wilson and all he gave me in the last 20 years in my theatre experience.

I also loved novels whose characters lived inside their novels like plays. I read Langston Hughes’ Jesse B. Semple, and every chapter was like the scenes of a play. Other playwrights include P.J. Gibson, Pearl Cleage, and Zora Neale Hurston. But too ... I really love the work of Tennessee Williams. And Shakespeare. Damaged people navigating life and circumstance. That’s who I want to watch on stage.

KL: What do you hope audiences take away from a play so steeped in history?

TA: I hope audiences take away so much intrigue that they go home moved to learn more about the period. I want the conversations over dinner after the show or after the second time seeing these excellent actors perform, that they ask serious questions about what they have perceived to be true in history and why they are enlightened by what they now know. I want audiences to have a good time but a visceral reaction; they won't let the play leave them for a few days. It’s to be discussed, lived, digested, experienced.

KL: Relentless is part of a larger trilogy. Can you share what audiences can expect in the future?

TA: Well ... I researched these characters and created such complete backstories, it felt unfair for that work to be mine and not shared. Thus, it became the inspiration to start a conversation between generations. Just like we’re examining 1919 in the theatre now, many other plays are steeped in history this season. I am intrigued by the conversation continuing. The second play explores the descendants of Relentless. Thus, how do we set our lineage up to succeed or fail? And what does that look like in 2022? The third play is a mystery.

about timeline

FROM THE MOMENT IN 1997 THAT SIX FOUNDERS each pitched in $50 to launch this company, TimeLine has worked to become one of Chicago’s leading cultural institutions by creating theatre that is more than just a few hours in a seat. Our team of Company Members works collaboratively to present riveting stories that link our past, present, and future—exploring today’s social and political issues through the lens of the past and inspiring ourselves to re-imagine tomorrow.

And the TimeLine experience extends well beyond the stage, encompassing meticulously researched and interactive lobby experiences, opportunities to discuss the show with artists, ways to take action on whatever the art inspires, and more.

It is a mission unique in Chicago, and beyond. As we celebrate our 25th Anniversary Season, TimeLine has presented 83 productions, including 11 world premieres and 38 Chicago premieres. Our work has been recognized: TimeLine received the prestigious 2016 MacArthur Award for Creative and Effective Institutions and has been named “Company of the Year” in The Wall Street Journal (2010), one of the American Theatre Wing’s top 10 emerging professional theatre companies nationwide (2011) and Chicago magazine’s “Best Theatre” in the city (2011). And we have been honored with 58 Jeff Awards, including an award for Outstanding Production 11 times.

We work to match artistic excellence with sophisticated business management, and these efforts also have been recognized.
TimeLine was the first arts organization to receive the Alford-Axelson Award for Nonprofit Managerial Excellence of a small company, and we have received the Association for Strategic Planning’s Richard Goodman Strategic Planning Award in the Non-Profit category.

TimeLine’s Living History Education Program, founded in 2006, brings TimeLine’s mission to Chicago Public Schools, working with students on creative exercises related to historically inspired stories on TimeLine’s stage and elsewhere in literature. During arts integration residencies of six to 13 sessions, students explore connections between history, art, and their own lives, developing critical thinking and communication skills.

In 2018, Living History launched a new program, TimeLine South—a unique arts program that provides teens a safe space for self-expression, creativity, and ensemble building on the south side of Chicago. And Living History continues to grow and extend its reach beyond the classroom and across the city. Recent and soon-to-launch programs include TimeLine Uptown, TimeLine's first after-school program at Uplift Community High School, and TimeLine Next Generation, a program for young adults ages 18-25.

TimeLine is led by Artistic Director PJ Powers, Managing Director Elizabeth K. Auman and Board President John Sterling.

about goodman

AMERICA’S “BEST REGIONAL THEATRE” (Time magazine), Goodman Theatre is a premier not-for-profit organization distinguished by the excellence and scope of its artistic programming and civic engagement. Led by Artistic Director Robert Falls and Executive Director Roche Schulfer, the theater’s artistic priorities include new play development (more than 150 world or American premieres in the past three decades), large scale musical theater works and reimagined classics (celebrated revivals include Falls’ productions of Death of a Salesman and The Iceman Cometh). Goodman Theatre artists and productions have earned two Pulitzer Prizes, 22 Tony Awards, over 160 Jeff Awards and many more accolades. In addition, the Goodman is the first theater in the world to produce all 10 plays in August Wilson’s “American Century Cycle;” and its annual holiday tradition A Christmas Carol, now in its fifth decade, has created a new generation of theatergoers. The Goodman also frequently serves as a production partner with local off-Loop theaters and national and international companies by providing financial support or physical space for a variety of artistic endeavors.

Committed to three core values of Quality, Diversity and Community, the Goodman proactively makes inclusion the fabric of the institution and develops education and community engagement programs that support arts as education. This practice uses the process of artistic creation to inspire youth, lifelong learners and audiences to find and/or enhance their voices, stories and abilities. The Goodman’s Alice Rapoport Center for Education and Engagement is the home of such programming, most offered free of charge, and has vastly expanded the theater’s ability to touch the lives of Chicagoland citizens (with 85% of youth participants coming from underserved communities) since its 2016 opening.

Goodman Theatre was founded by William O. Goodman and his family in honor of their son Kenneth, an important figure in Chicago’s cultural renaissance in the early 1900s. The Goodman family’s legacy lives on through the continued work and dedication of Kenneth’s family, including Albert Ivar Goodman, who with his late mother, Edith-Marie Appleton, contributed the necessary funds for the creation of the new Goodman center in 2000.

Today, Goodman Theatre leadership also includes the distinguished members of the Artistic Collective: Rebecca Gilman, Dael Orlandersmith, Henry Godinez, Steve Scott, Kimberly Senior, Chuck Smith, Regina Taylor, Henry Wishcamper and Mary Zimmerman. Jeff Hesse is Chairman of Goodman Theatre’s Board of Trustees, Fran Del Boca is Women’s Board President and Megan McCarthy Hayes is President of the Scenemakers Board for young professionals.
